At the 63rd International DWV-Congress, the German Wine-growers' Association (Deutscher Weinbauverband e.V. - DWV) would like to bring together practitioners, scientists and industry representatives to discuss hot topics in the industry. To ensure that the design and implementation of the wine-growing congresses are not a one-way street, the DWV will be delighted with the active participation of future and former conference participants in its survey on topic selection, speakers, opportunities for meetings, forms of meetings, etc.

"Take part and make the most out of the opportunity to influence the content and organizational structure of the 63rd and future DWV congresses by taking part in our survey," recommends Secretary General Dr. Rudolf Nickenig to all key players in the wine industry who see themselves as disseminators of knowledge and trends.

Anyone who invests ten minutes of their valuable time to complete the survey and inspire others will also have the chance to win one of 18 conference tickets for the 63rd International DWV-Congress. The digital questionnaire is available at: www.dwv-kongress.de

Incidentally, participation in the congress will include free admission to the INTERVITIS INTERFRUCTA HORTITECHNICA trade fair, which offers a tasting zone, a demonstration of machines and the special show "Drones and Robotics".

And here's a taste of the 63rd International DWV-Congress, under whose motto "Viticulture 4.0" digital meetings and enjoyment could play an important role: The "Wine, Tourism and Architecture" conference on 6th of November 2018 will continue to be an integral part of the wine-growing congresses. In this context, the designated conference managers Dr. Hermann Kolesch (LWG Veitshöchheim), Friedrich Lörcher (LVWO Weinsberg) and Kathrin Saaler (DLR Oppenheim) will this year investigate the question of whether "Alexa" will soon be ordering their favorite wine.
